And since we've been talking so much about digital set top boxes lately we figured we'd mention that a company called Matrixstream says they have a new way that cable companies to deliver high-definition video on demand over the Internet to their I-MX 1000 IP TV set top box. Even better, they say that they can even deliver DVD-quality video over a WiFi connection (doing that with HDTV is considerably more difficult). There's nothing about what whether or not there any cable providers are actually planning to use their setup.
